Bio

Producer, engineer and artist Shadoe handles every stage of his dark, genre-blurring records himself, from writing and production to mixing and mastering. Born in Baltimore, Maryland, and based in Florida, he began making music at age 12 and had been recording for years by the time Bruce Swedien, the famed engineer behind Michael Jackson's Thriller, became his mentor. His early albums drew millions of streams, and the 2022 song "Party Time," a collaboration with actor Peter Dante and Death Row Records keyboardist Ronnie King, reached number three on the iTunes reggae chart. Shadoe then pulled those albums from streaming services and started over, re-emerging in 2025 with the album State of Static and a run of more than twenty singles, among them "Lethal Dose" with Spaggy G, "Kill Switch" featuring Twiztid's Jamie Madrox, and September 2026's "BLACK SHADES." He also DJs, with sets that pull from every genre.
